GMA calls for 4-party summit on May polls

By Christine O. Avendaño and Jerome Añing

STILL HOUNDED BY THE GHOST OF THE 'WELLS BURN' scandal of 2004, President Macapagal-Arroyo wants to wipe the slate clean for the controversial national and local elections on May 14. She is now yesterday said her administration would ensure clean, honest and orderly polls.

Melo panel tags Palparan in slays

Another militant gunned down in Catbalogan

By Fe Zamora and Jory A. Gabarte, Inquirer Photos

RETIRED SUPREME COURT JUSTICE JOSE MELO yesterday said his commission, citing command responsibility, had recommended that retired Maj. Gen. Avito Palparan and other commanders be held responsible for the extrajudicial killings in their respective areas during their tours of duty.

In the latest killing, one of two men on a motorcycle yesterday shot and killed Desemondar de Luna, 58, a member of the militant Bayan Muna, as the latter walked under a tree being attended from a truck of the National Food Authority in Catbalogan, Samar, police said.

De Luna, an 18th driver, was the 27th militant killed in judicial violence during President Macapagal-Arroyo's administration, according to an Inquirer count. Leftist groups have a higher toll, saying politically motivated killings since 2001 have claimed over 700 lives, including victims of armed clashes.

Melo said holding military commanders responsible for extrajudicial killings was one of the recommendations in the final report of the fact-finding commission formed in August 2006 by the Arroyo to look into the political violence following a local and international outcry.

The 89-page report of the commission headed by Melo was submitted to the Arroyo last week. Melo declined to release the report, saying the President had the prerogative to make it public.

The 74-year-old Melo said the assumption of the five-member panel showed that "impunity of the violence seems better solution rather than" and that the supposed assassins belonged to the military.

"But we don't want to tag the whole military establishment, only elements of the military who were allowed to do their thing without supervision from higher officers," Melo said in a telephone interview.

"Some of the killings were attributed to politicians, some to the security guards of households, but (the) majority of the killings pointed to three military elements (in the cockpit)," he said.

CAMP OLINA, PANRANGA—Retired Maj. Gen. Avito Palparan yesterday said he could not be held responsible for the extrajudicial killings during his tour of duty in General Linao because "some of those were perpetrated by soldiers under my command."

Palparan, who headed the Army's 7th Infantry Division from September 2005 until his retirement on Sept. 13 last year, was reacting to the Melo Commission's recommendation that military commanders be held accountable for the killings.

He said first and foremost, the cases lodged against him or the commanders under him did "not pertain any specific soldier."

DESPITE ALL THE TALK of reaching Serenity, two of the opposition's big guns yesterday spurned Malacanan-backed attempts to lure them into joining the administration's "Team Unity" electoral slate.

"I am gratified by the offer of the various political parties, but in view I declined it, it would be politically independent but with the opposition," former Sen. Loren

Legarda said last night. "I wouldn't be deemed (as) by anyone."

"Chiz is surely running (with the) opposition," said Rep. Michael Duavit said of party mate

Senator Rep. Francis Escudero. Duavit is secretary general of the Nationalist People's Coalition, a party split into two camps, under which supports President Macapagal-Arroyo and the other which is aligned with other opposition parties.

Bank Legarda, who has consistently opposed attempts of possible senatorial candidacies, and Escudero have been the targets of Melo Arroyo's catch-all efforts to set up a senatorial lineup for the May 14 national elections that would shake some of the chief critics of the President.

A number of Escudero's staff also confirmed to the Inquirer that the lawmaker was staying with the opposition.

Malacanan sources also appeared to spurn oppositionists that the "Team Unity" ticket would include Escudero.

WRONG CRIME?

Atong's guilty plea questioned

By Norman Bordadora

THREE MONTHS AFTER his release for a short jail term in exchange for his confession of his role in the alleged diversion of P128 million in tobacco money to President Joseph Estrada in 1998 exacerbated rough sailing at yesterday's pre-trial proceedings.

Justices of the Sandiganbayan special division questioned the crime Atong pleaded guilty to—corruption of a public official, which is punishable by one to six years in prison—because the case information never had any offering, much less, giving thereof the latter.

"There is nothing in your review that (Atong) bribed him. He merely provided the receipt for which the tobacco excise taxes were diverted," Associate Justice Francisco Villena said as Special Prosecutor Dennis Villa Ignacio and Atong's defense lawyer Alfredo Villanor argued the merits of the plea bargain agreement.

Senate, House ratify bicam report on P1.126-T budget

By Tito Bojardo and Michael Ueber

THE SENATE AND THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES have today ratified the 16-point, 100-page bicameral report on the P1.126-billion 2007 national budget after a nearly month-long deadlock on a contentious school-leaving program.

The senators were unanimously in agreement, to approve the report in the name of their elected second chamber, a vote more than a week before Congress adjourns on Feb. 9. In the May 14 vote, the House also unanimously approved the President's proposed budget.

The President, Manopo-Arroyo says, the budget measure into his third year.

The government has been operating on a P107.3-billion budget since 2005 after the two chambers of Congress failed to pass a budget in 2004.

Sen. Franklin Drilon, House minority chief, said the budget would do little to curb the perennial shortage in classrooms and teachers in the public schools.

It also provided a P10-billion fund for the construction of new schools.

Gov't allots P877 per voter to let OFWs vote via internet

By Mike Comenay

THE GOVERNMENT IS ALLOCATING P877 per voter under a pilot project that would enable overseas Filipinos to at least use country to mark their ballot for the latest set, a Commission on Elections official said yesterday.

"That's cheap for mobile technology," said Commission President Teodoro A. Alonzo, who the body once has an "80 percent" chance of implementing the scheme for testing in Singapore.

The officials say more is to come to more 20,000 registered Filipino voters.

He said, in P877 per voter, the Commission is allocating P32.5 million to pay them ahead of the cost of the Philippine elections in terms of high-tech polling.

On the average, national elections held within the country would cost the Commission P100 per voter, he said.

In the first year overseas elections testing held in May 2006, the cost went up to P1,400 per overseas voter to cover nearly 100,000 registered voters, personal meeting, information campaigns, etc., Teodoro added.

The official gave these figures to the media at yesterday's agreement signing between the Commission and the Department of Foreign Affairs on the conduct of overseas polling for one-half a million registered voters.

USC Undersecretary Rafael Argueta said that from around 354,000 registered overseas voters in 2004, the figure has since grown to a third, about 354,300 voters are expected to swing to 87 polling posts in over 100 countries for the May 2007 elections.

Teodoro said ComElex chose Singapore as pilot "e-voting" because 60 to 70 percent of its population would have access to computers, among the highest rates in any major state in the world.

He said the ComElex was to test the scheme pending a check on whether such would be "legal and ethical" to its implementation in view of the poll modernization law—or the Automated Elections System Act—signed by President Macapagal-Arroyo last Jan. 23.

"Through e-voting, a voter will be assigned a kind of personal identification number (PIN) so one can vote by accessing the ComElex web site that his ballot can be from any Internet link," Teodoro explained.

The procedure would still apply to a Filipino voter registered in Singapore but who might be in the Philippines during the May 2007 election period, he stressed.

5 new witnesses vs rebel soldiers

By Abhinav Gupta

IF LEAST FIVE NEW WITNESSES BELONGING to the military have submitted statements to police concerning the civilian case against some 10 soldiers and officers linked to the heinous attempt to overthrow the Arroyo administration in February last year.

A senior police officer, who spoke on condition of anonymity for lack of authorization, said he believes the testimonies of the new witnesses would strengthen the case against the accused soldiers.

"We believe their testimonies would corroborate our evidence against those accused," the officer said.

The seven and the witnesses, who were mostly from the Marine Corps, did not directly participate in the February coup attempt but had "indirect involvement" in the coup attempt, he said.

The officer also said a "big case" personality was not yet identified by the witnesses. The personality was not to have been part of the group that launched the coup last year.

Police have filed criminal charges against soldiers belonging to the Magdala group whose numbers were reported to a rebel base in Bulacan, General Santos City, last year.

Some of these accused allegedly included former Sen. Gregorio "Gringo" Francisco, lawyer Christopher Belmonte and former Ambassador Rex Soliman in the plot to oust Mr. Arroyo. Only Belmonte is legally wanted.

A few days after the failed coup, an episode occurred in Philippine Marine headquarters at Fort Bonifacio where this was a result of the relief of Marine commander Maj. Gen. Romeo Alimanan, Marikina people, however, thought it was an attempt to continue the coup.

Some military officers are undergoing a general court-martial for their alleged participation in the failed February coup attempt. They include Alimanan, former Sen. Gregorio Belmonte, Brig. Gen. Danilo Lina and Marine Col. Arce Quinsola.

SO THE FILIPINO PEOPLE MAY KNOW:

A QUESTION OF FAIRNESS AND DECENCY

THE FACTS: The Arroyo government is pushing the indirect but controversial sale of a big block of PLDT shares to a group of foreign investors composed of the Hong Kong-based First Pacific Co. Ltd. and NTT DoCoMo of Japan. The block of PLDT shares has a current market value of about P30 billion, but the government, through the Committee on Privatization (COP), is selling it at 10 percent discount, or P25.5 billion. The government says the sale seeks to raise funds to reduce the budget deficit. To be concluded by the end of January, the sale raises several issues:

FOREIGN OWNERSHIP

The sale is a blatant and blatant violation of the 1987 Constitution that limits foreign ownership to 40 percent of the equity of a telecommunication entity. PLDT has admitted that foreign firms already own 64.2 percent of its common shareholdings. Since, the block of PLDT comprise 6.2 percent of PLDT equity, the foreign ownership will rise to 70.4 percent. This is compounded by the foreign investors' heavy borrowings from local banks, depriving legitimate Filipino entrepreneurs of capital to shore up their businesses.

RIGHTFUL VALUATION

The P25.5 billion price tag is a bargain for the foreign investors, one of which has a dubious reputation and track record of handling "rusted" Indonesian money. It is a sweetheart deal or a fire sale.

How the national government has reached this low price is a big question. PLDT is now the nation's most profitable firm with an estimated net profit of about P35 billion in 2006. Also, PLDT share prices have been rising – and will continue to rise over the years. Instead of selling the PLDT shares at a premium of between 20 to 50 percent over its current market price (which is normal for block sales), the government is pushing the sale at a discount, where it stands to lose between P9 to P17 billion in revenues.

TRANSPARENCY

Under haste and lack of transparency have characterized the asset disposal. It took two weeks to complete the public bidding, which few people knew and where legitimate business entities, especially those Filipino-owned, had almost no chance to participate. No credible and independent financial advisor was hired. The bidding took place when typhoons "Honing" was killing hundreds of Filipinos and public debates were raging over the issue of amending the Constitution through a constituent assembly. The privatization of big ticket assets usually takes several months to complete with stringent bidding rules to follow. The transaction is more of a negotiated sale under the guise of a public bidding.

MISREPRESENTATION

The national government and the PLDT propaganda machinery have been saying that what is being sold is a big block of Philippine Telecommunication Investment Corporation (PTIC) shares and not PLDT's. As such, the price is low because PTIC is not a listed firm, unlike PLDT. This is a lie. PTIC is the holding firm that possesses the controlling interest in PLDT. What are being sold are PLDT shares, not PTIC shares, which are worthless without the PLDT shares.

MOTIVES

The hasty sale of a big block of government asset at a very cheap price to foreign investors raises many questions about the motives of its movers. To augment the budget deficit is undesirable. Is this a way for the Arroyo administration to raise campaign funds for its candidates in the coming mid-term polls? Has graft money changed hands? Who are the powerful people behind this deal?

THE KILUSANG MAKABANSANG EKONOMIYA (KME) opposes the impending sale, which will be a clear violation of the Constitution and the basic tenets of fairness, decency and transparency.

We urge the people, who are involved in and endorsing this sale, to back out because they will certainly face the people's wrath for their irresponsible and treasonous acts.

We urge the President to cancel the sale and initiate a re-bidding with more transparent rules. If this is not possible, we urge the President to keep these PLDT shares in the name of the national government primarily to boost its presence in a critical sector, which is telecommunications.

We urge Congress to proceed with its probe "in aid of legislation" of the circumstances surrounding the anomalous deal and come out with a clear and unequivocal legislation that would prevent sweetheart deals or fire sale of government assets.

We urge certain members of Congress to refrain from supporting and pushing what is patently illegal and anomalous sale and to adhere without fear or favor to the time-honored principles of public service.

We urge other responsible sectors of Philippine society to join hands with us in our quest of economic nationalities, where the interest of Filipino entrepreneurs is given focus and importance. It is about time to unite.

Atong with one of his lawyers Mark Canedo

Atong's guilty plea questioned

By Arroyo J. I.

The criminal information against Bantala and the testimony of Enrile for his last "last call" Bantala showed that Ang delivered ₱12.54 million to Enrile for his original demand for the balance-paying privilege to Enrile's residence on Pulo Ibarra in Greenhills, San Juan, Metro Manila, in August 1998.

Necessary to plunder

"Who doesn't he just plead guilty to being an accessory to plunder?" Villamor said.

The Solicitor General's office declined to bring Bantala, Jose Anggelo Bantala, lawyer Edwino Soriano and his lawyer Bantala.

Bantala is facing plunder charges for allegedly receiving some ₱4 billion in assets from alleged plundering operations, including Kibabo and various companies.

He is also charged with paying for alleged bribery during his term.

In the plea bargaining agreement, Atong, Enrile's former gambling buddy, pleaded guilty to the crime of occupation of a public office in exchange for the admission that he had conspired with Enrile to divert the ₱200 million and that he would return the ₱200 million to Enrile's account from the transaction.

The deal was specifically Ang, Villamor, Mirasol, Chief State Prosecutor Francisco Tadeo and Office Chief Mirasol's last term.

It appeared by the deal, however, the agreement would allow Ang to enter a plea of guilty to the crime of bribery and avoid the charges of plunder.

As part of the deal, Ang would admit to the prosecution of cases "in which he had personal knowledge."

"He had knowledge of the bribe money, but he did not give or offer the bribe," Associate Justice Francisco Tadeo said.

Not necessary crime

The Federal Trade Commission definition of a public official in making offers or promises, or giving gifts or presents to public officials in exchange for the commission of a crime in addition to or in furtherance of a public interest.

"There is no allegation in the criminal information that PDI officials were given by Ang... (B) in connection to a commission crime," Villamor said.

Ang is accessory to plunder under a policy of eight years in prison imposed with a fine of one million pesos, according to Villamor. "With the mitigating factor of a voluntary admission, it can go down further," he said.

Bantala also included the Bantala defense plea's rejection of the plea bargain deal as an extortionate conspiracy to extort from the state.

"What would be the purpose if it is to extort committed plunder, period?" Villamor asked.

Bantala lawyer Jose Espinoza had asked for a clarification from the court if the deal would be used against the former President. "Saying, in an earlier investigation, said the defense panel should have given some notice of the contents of the deal."

Necessary to justify plea

"[The defense in the alleged conspiracy] was intended to obstruct the court... We thought it was necessary to justify the plea for a lesser offense," Villamor said to the court.

"If we put that deal into a bad light, we might lose it. But it is something beyond our control," he said.

Villamor mentioned that the contents of the plea bargain could not be used in evidence against Enrile because it was an agreement between Ang and the government prosecutors. Ang's defense lawyer, Villamor and Mark Canedo argued in court to exclude the agreement from the plea deal against the deal's contents.

3 days for contempt

Noting that they would not get a free admission or the agreement or plea bargain, a plea bargain, Villamor asked the court for three days to allow him and Canedo to represent on the court on the deal against the terms.

Asked what Ang's lawyer thought of the justice's view that Ang may have continued to refuse to admit in the case information, Canedo said, "We'll continue that."

Villamor said government prosecutors would not withdraw the deal.

"What do you call giving ₱12.54 million to Mr. Enrile? Is that not the last plea bargain?" Villamor said, noting a clear element of corruption of public office in Enrile's delivery of the funds to Enrile.

He said the court in the plea bargain deal that said Ang conspired with Enrile to divert the ₱200 million may also be included in the ing a crime.

"It won't be used against Mr. Enrile who says, 'He says we can already take it out. Let's see,' he said."

Shipping firm faces charges for coral reef destruction

By Romo Aranda

MANILA—THE CITY government will file a damage suit against a shipping company after one of its vessels ran aground in a marine sanctuary in Bataan.

Mar Mayor William Alano said the ship, the MS. Julia Reyes, ran aground in the 5.5-hectare marine sanctuary off the coast of Bataan.

An affidavit submitted by Alano established the sanctuary in 2001. The Philippine Coast Guard (PCG) said the Julia Reyes came from the Subic Bay Division, carrying some 2,000 bags of animal feed consigned to new fish seed.

The ship was not included in a permit plan in the neighboring bay of Bataan.

A PCG report said the ship was a vessel owned by the Philippine Coast Guard (PCG) and was carrying some 2,000 bags of animal feed consigned to new fish seed.

TATAD ASKS ERAP – WHY DO YOU WANT TO DO THIS TO OUR PEOPLE?

15 January 2007

PRESIDENT JOSEPH EJERCITO ESTRADA

Chairman Emeritus
UNITED OPPOSITION

Dear Mr. President:

I write to make of record my position on certain issues related to the May 2007 senatorial elections. My only concern is the honor of our party and wellbeing of our people.

I shall start by recalling our UNO meeting at Polo Street on New Year's day (morning). Joining the President then were Mayor Jojo Binay, Enrie Maceda, Tito Sotto, Chiz Escudero, Roy Morales, and myself. Fred Lim and Baby Asistio joined later.

The meeting followed no set agenda or structure. Tito Sotto had much to say about his group which he believed should be on the UNO ticket. This included:

1. Tessie Aquino Oreta, who did not seek reelection after her first term ended in 2001;
2. Sonny Oresia, who ran unsuccessfully on the administration ticket in 2004;
3. Greg Honasan, who is now under detention on charges of rebellion following his highly publicized capture in Quezon City;
4. Loren Legarda, who wants to go back to the Senate at the cost of her vice presidential protest against Noli de Castro; and
5. Tito Sotto himself, who is back on entertainment tv in preparation for the campaign.

It was the first time I heard of this group earnestly wanting to run under the Opposition. Last year, they sent Johnny Ropes to represent them in our UNO meetings. From him we learned that they had been preparing to run, but that they would rather stay "somewhere in the middle," than identify themselves openly with the Opposition. Many of us (notably Jojo Binay) were particularly anxious about that statement. So I listened to Tito with undivided attention.

Tito and Chiz Escudero provided most of the conversation, with Enrie Maceda occasionally interjecting. Mention was made of

1. Ping Lason, who has abandoned his earlier decision to run for Mayor of Manila and decided instead to seek reelection;
2. Ed Angara, who was reported to be putting a "unity ticket," but in whose behalf Loren Legarda had reportedly telephoned the President for possible inclusion in the Opposition lineup;
3. Manny Villar and his group, which includes Joker Arroyo, Ralph Recto, and Kiko Pangilinan; and
4. Orlan's Liberal Party, which was reported to be pushing for Noyroy Aquino's inclusion in the UNO slate.

No one opposed Lason's reentry, but no one pushed for Angara's inclusion. There was not much information about Villar's group – not even Jojo Binay could say whether or not his friend Joker was running again. The President said he expects to meet shortly with Villar. Upon mention of Noyroy Aquino's name, Tito Sotto promptly cut in to say that between Noyroy and his auntie, Tessie Aquino Oreta, the latter would have better chances of winning. Fred Lim disagreed, saying that if Noyroy ran, no sister Krys Aquino, who is a tv host, would certainly ensure his winning.

I made two short interventions:

1) I proposed that UNO set some criteria or standards before admitting anyone who wants to ride the Opposition bandwagon. Some of these people had joined the President without ceremony to support Mrs. Arroyo in 2001 and 2004; now they want UNO to give them a ride because it seems no longer profitable to be identified with Mrs. Arroyo, although they have not openly abandoned her. They want to collect on every throw of the dice even after they've lost the game. And we learn so eager to provide the revolving door for their crass opportunism. Has it never occurred to us that UNO, rather than Ed Angara whose UNO has excluded from its lineup, could end up putting together the "UNITY TICKET" that combines the best and the worst administration and Opposition personalities?

2) With great pain, I expressed some reservations about stuffing Koko Pimental, Alan Peter Cayetano, and J.V. Ejercito as UNO candidates while Koko's father – Senate Minority Leader Nene Pimental, Alan Peter's sister – Sen. Pia Cayetano, and J.V. Ejercito's half-brother – Sen. Jinggoy Estrada are sitting in the Senate until 2010. I just could not accept the idea of such bright young men doing what the "biga to end all bigas" would probably not do, and for the Senate, with all its absurdities, to end up as a real and shadow "Family Ball." Where Valacang failed, UNO just might succeed – we would abolish the Senate's reason for being.

I would have been proud to campaign for these young men if this one impediment did not exist, or if their next of kin gave up their Senate seats right now. But under the circumstances, the Titanic would sink if the three voters came on board. I would rather encourage J.V. Ejercito to go for a third term as Mayor of San Juan; Koko Pimental to try his luck a second time in Cagayan de Oro, where he lost his mayoralty bid when his father was Senate President; and Alan Peter to do something exciting in Taguig in the meantime. They have all the time in the world to wait, they can wait; they should wait.

I had to die in that meeting to be able to say the first line of a long sentence. I had already lost too many friends because of politics and I did not want to lose any more than I already have. But the truth needed to be said, and nobody else seemed willing to say it. I had to take the risk. The ancients said it so well: Arctus Plots, arctus Scrotes, et magis arctus rectus – "Plots is dear to me, Scrotes is dear, but the truth is dearer still."

This was not a question of the Constitution or the law, but simply of ethics – of what is right and proper. Article II, Sec. 26 of the 1987 Constitution says, "The State shall guarantee equal access to opportunities for public service, and prohibit political dynasties as may be defined by law." No enabling law has been enacted, but we have a serious moral duty to live by the spirit of the Constitution, and not to make the problem of dynasties any more messy than it already is.

Political dynasties are either appreciated or hated, tolerated or feared. But even in the worst of cases, dynastic family members by simultaneously to occupy so many different offices as possible, or else they alternate or rotate in holding on to a particular office that allows them to exercise power. Never do they sit together in the same office at the same time. This is precisely what the three young men's senatorial bid threatens to alter.

The obvious assumption is that the voters are so posed off with ODA that they will eat any kind of dung we give them. This is false. We cannot have such a very poor opinion of our people. In the end, they will prove us wrong, whatever the paid politicians tell us. But should error and madness prevail, three families would be holding six Senate seats – one fourth of the Senate – after May 2007. Thereafter, twelve or eight or six families could end up controlling all 24 seats. Husbands and wives, together with their sons and daughters, and uncles and aunts, why not, could end up running as one big gang.

You, Mr. President, and we, your friends in UNO, have a special responsibility to make sure this does not even begin to happen. The Senate is a small body of 24 members, representing a nation of 90 million Filipinos or about 18 million families. No single family has a vested right to be represented there. Membership in the Senate is a privilege conferred by the people. It is a gift from them, except when cheats manage to rig the electoral process. No two senators from a single nuclear family had ever sat there until Jinggoy was elected in 2004, after his mother Sen. Loi Estrada had been elected in 2001. But this was the result of an extraordinary situation, an exception which proves the rule.

We all know how and why it happened. In 2001, the President was removed in a coup after his impeachment trial was cut short by a walkout of the prosecutors. He wanted to show – and the Opposition and the voters agreed with him then – that despite his removal he continued to enjoy popular support which the people were willing to translate into Senate seats for his wife Loi and his son Jinggoy. That, however, was to be a one-shot deal only, not to be used as a precedent or model.

Now that Senator Loi has decided, in your words, "to retire" and become your "caregiver," that exceptional situation would cease to exist, and what many believe was truly an error would be finally cured. But were the President to inflict his other son J.V. Ejercito on the UNO ticket, then he would be perpetuating the error, and encouraging others to follow his example, as seems to be happening now to the two otherwise bright young men – Alan Peter Cayetano and Koko Pimental.

Not only would the President be perpetuating an error, he would also be confirming the suspicion of those who reject any possibility of his assuming any leadership role in the post-Arroyo scenario before or after 2010 – that his idea of the national interest is seriously impaired by his devotion to the personal. This is totally unnecessary and unfair.

We at UNO cannot possibly support this error without in effect telling the masses, whose champions we say we are, that, contrary to what we have been saying to them, and what we have led them to believe, our primary interest has never been to serve them but only to serve ourselves. We would thereby be throwing away our moral advantage, and making our party the most effective campaigners for the administration.

I have no doubt that if the administration tried to do what the leader of UNO wants to do now, we would be the first ones to shout to the high heavens in outrage and anger. Why then should we ever want to do it ourselves? Our people expect us to do better, and we have so assured them. Have we been lying to them all this time that we have been saying that Mrs. Arroyo is the best? If we are no better than the ones we denounce, what right have we to be here at all? To whom will our people turn if they see that the administration and the Opposition have cancelled each other out? Would this not be the cruelest betrayal?

In the meeting, I waited to hear someone say I was wrong. I waited to be told that the reason or reasons for drafting the three next of kin of sitting senators were far beyond my ability to grasp in one short lifetime. But there was no effort to shoot down or refute my objection. No effort to explain why UNO has to have all the star fruits and the three wonders on its dream ticket. You will, therefore, understand why when you and Enrie Maceda agreed to release to the media the names of the three wonders as part of your proposed ticket, while my objection was waiting to be addressed, I felt that my long service to the Opposition and my presence in that meeting had just been annulled. That was the worst possible slap I had ever received – and from my party colleagues yet. For that reason, I decided that any future participation in any UNO activity on my part would be completely superfluous.

The real issue here is our moral integrity as the presumed alternative to the Arroyo government. I have fought for this, a little more than many of those you see in the street marches. After the 2001 coup, many simply decided to cross over to the administration. Many others decided to watch and see, to bury their heads in the sand, or to negotiate the terms of mutually beneficial coexistence. I decided to keep on clarifying the issues for myself, the Opposition, and the nation. Many of these now groveling before you seem to laugh at the very line which they now superciliously spout for your pleasure. There were times when all I could hear was my lone solitary voice – and that of Professor Alan Pagan, whose right to practice and teach law has since been cancelled – badly questioning President Arroyo's legitimacy after almost everyone else had caved in.

But I refused to back down. With the help of a few brave souls on the Citizens vs. Corruption Task Force, I continued to expose major scams in the government, including the P100-billion customs bonds scam, the P100-million DOTC airport land scam, the $2-million SSP fund diversion in Hong Kong, the misuse of OWA funds, and the P726-million Agricultural Modernization Fund scam, now known as the Jopoc Rotonda affair, which became cause celebre at the Senate in 2006, two years after I had exposed it at the start of the 2004 campaign.

That entailed a heavy price, and I paid it in full. In the 2004 elections, which I thought was the best of my senatorial campaign, I was singled out for demolition. This was known to PMP and to KMP, whose members had read or heard about Oplan Checkmate, which detailed the plot against our presidential ticket and me, and which had surfaced at the start of the campaign. As always, you did what you could to help, but if there was any party or coalition effort to save my candidacy from the Oplan, I never caught my attention.

On the campaign trail, radio-TV coverage suddenly vanished as soon as it was my turn to speak. My campaign posters everywhere were brought down by the wrecking crew in less than 24 hours. On election day, my name disappeared from the 12-man KMP senatorial slate on the Cordoc official list of candidates posted in every voting booth to guide voters, and appeared separately as the lone PMP senatorial candidate at the bottom of the printed form.

At the counting, my voice mysteriously atrophied by something like 80% as they traveled from the barangay precinct to the national canvassing center. In contrast, the votes of one leading candidate were padded by at least 200% to make the recipient one of the top senatorial winners. Ultimately, my recorded "historic vote" – a term known to seasoned political players and analysts – which in two successful senatorial elections had risen to close to 11 million by 1999, was savaged to nearly half that number.

Today, I am defendant in a criminal libel case filed by the First Gentleman in a Manila court arising from a 2004 post-election newspaper article which attributes to me certain statements that are not even slightly libelous. My name had been dropped from the complaint in 2004 but was reinstated in 2006, upon motion of the complainant – after the supposed crime had legally prescribed.

All this is par for the course. None of it should have been mentioned here were I not obliged to show that I have earned the right to be heard on the basic morality of our cause.

Before I left Polk street, you came over to say you would like to have me included in your senatorial slate. I begged off. "Please don't, Mr. President," I said. "You tried to insist, but I pleaded, 'please, Mr. President.'" You did not say so, but you seemed to be under the impression that I was objecting to certain candidates because I wanted to be a candidate myself. That was not the point at all. It was a total misimpression. We should know each other well enough by now for you to know if there was anything I have ever done or would ever do just for my own self-interest.

My one consuming desire is to see the country return to a state of normalcy where all can live a morally upright life, and one does not have to be part of a power structure to get the respect he deserves. Where law and justice are one and truth prevails, where deserving individuals are elected to high office because the office needs them, and not because they need the office. For this reason, I wanted to see electoral reforms before the parade of celebrities and popular incompetents begins. Thus, I was for boycotting the elections if no electoral reforms were put in place. However, that position was quickly vaporized after a swarm of ambitious innocents, whose idea of national politics consists purely of packing public office with synthetic personalities, started hyping the Opposition's alleged ability to give Mrs. Arroyo the same "thumping" the Democrats gave the Republicans in the last US elections. This was capped by the President's premature announcement of his dream ticket.

This, I thought, was a serious mistake, as did a number of respected foreign analysts. Under these circumstances, I could not bring myself to consider running again, even though I honestly believe I had the right and duty to regain the Senate seat which was fraudulently taken away from me in 2004. So when you asked me why I would not want to join your ticket, I said: first, because I wasn't sure elections would be held – (no date, there is still no budget); second, because I wasn't sure the elections would be honest, assuming they were held – we have not insisted on electoral reforms and no reforms have been put in place; third, because I did not believe I could be part of a ticket whose other candidates I could not even endorse to the public. There were two other reasons: I could not allow it to interrupt the joys of grand parenting, and I need to honor some publishing commitments, which could no longer be delayed.

This, for me then, is a new turning point. I began my political career in 1968, when I was appointed to the Cabinet at 29, the youngest such appointee in our history. Through the years, I have fought many fights, many of them lost causes. I have not learned to exchange principle for personal pleasure or profit, and I have always paid the price. This allows me to stand on my own, with no fear of powers or personalities, of the dark or of the light, to move quietly in my sleep every night in the hope of waking up in the morning to a loving and merciful God, to speak up whenever truth demands a witness, and something that needs to be said in speech and in silence is not being said.

I would be untrue to myself if I said that what the leaders of UNO propose to do with their "UNITY TICKET" is right. It is most certainly not, and I will not dishonor our friendship by keeping silent or pretending that it is right, or of little or no consequence. I want to thank you for your friendship and for the many personal kindnesses you have extended to me and to my wife, in the course of that friendship. We shall remain friends for as long as we both put ourselves and our personal interests in the service of truth, justice, and the common good.

May the good Lord guide you always.

Sincerely yours,

US, Iraqi forces kill 300 Iraq militants

NAJAF, IRAQ—US and Iraqi forces killed some 300 gunmen from an apocalyptic Muslim cult in a day-long battle involving US tanks and aircraft near the Shiite holy city of Najaf, Iraqi police, army and political sources said.

The US military said on Monday it was an ongoing operation as it could not provide any details, as Iraqi army sources said US forces took control of the operation on Sunday and Monday morning in the area until well after dawn on Monday, which was the climax of Najaf, the high point of the Shiite religious calendar.

Two American were killed, the US military said on Monday when an attack helicopter was down during the battle that was one of the strongest incidents of the 4-year conflict. Iraqi officials said the helicopter seemed to have been shot down.

Police Colonel Ali Hassan said 200 to 250 gunmen had been killed in the operation and dozens more arrested. Three Iraqi soldiers were killed and six more wounded, and five policemen were killed. Another 40 Iraq police and soldiers were wounded.

According to one Iraqi political source, hundreds of fighters, drawn from both Sunni and Shiite communities, fought throughout Sunday and late into the night.

A 100 km south of Baghdad, some US tanks and heavy tanks shot off on Monday and an Iraqi officer said it was just war.

Details of the day's fighting were sketchy and the origin of the fighting unclear. An Iraqi army source said some of the dead were headbushes belonging to members of a "badly organized" group.

The political source said up to 1,000 fighters had been involved. An Iraqi army source said they were "strategically and tactically well-organized."

The US military officially blamed the operation for Iraq's presence in Iraq, saying forces had been in the area since 2003, but the source said they were "strategically and tactically well-organized."

Najaf's Suni Arab and Shia had fought the apocalyptic but unprovoked fight to kill leading Shiite clerics in Najaf on Monday in a battle with the cleric of Najaf, the most famous of the clerics of Najaf, the most famous of the clerics of Najaf, the most famous of the clerics of Najaf.

"There is a conspiracy on all the things on the 30th day of the month," he said, referring to Monday by the Muslim calendar.

Initially on Monday the Iraqi government described the fighting as between the majority in the Shiite world and the more dominant minority in Iraq, where Shiites have been in the majority since the US invasion of 2003.

The two sides are entangled in conflict in Iraq that many fear is descending into all-out civil war.

Political and security sources said they were followers of Ahmad Hassan al-Baghdadi and described him as an apocalyptic leader claiming to be the successor of the Shiite—a messiah-like figure who claims to have come to the start of a new world.

Similar violent cults have been a feature of Islamic history. They have declared temporal Muslim leaders illegitimate and have been followed by thousands of followers.

Among other violent incidents associated with practitioners of the culting of the Shiite were the killing of 100 Shiite in Iraq in 2003 and the killing of 100 Shiite in Iraq in 2003.

Up to 1.5 million pilgrims gathered in Najaf, 700,000 of whom were from Iraq. The death toll in Najaf was 300, according to the Iraqi government, which said the fighting was between the Shiite and the majority.

The fighting was between the Shiite and the majority.

Karzai offers talks with Taliban

KARAI—AFGHAN PRESIDENT Hamid Karzai on Monday offered peace talks with a resurgence of the Taliban in the border area of the Karzai province.

Karzai made the offer while speaking at a religious gathering in the city of one of the border areas of the Karzai province, but he said he was specifically meant the Taliban.

Karzai said he was prepared for the "presence" of those who join the Taliban, offering to negotiate with the Taliban and the Taliban.

Karzai has been in office since 2001, after the US-led coalition invaded Afghanistan, offering to negotiate with the Taliban and the Taliban.

SBP hopes to get Fiba nod in March

By June Mariarte

THE SAMAHANG BASKETBOY, ng Pilipinas hopes to officially secure accreditation from the International Basketball Federation when Fiba holds its central board meeting on March 2 in Thailand.

Fiba chief Ricky Vargas, one of the prime movers of the SBP, said the new group body is ready to start its national team after the election of internationalizing the Fiba Congress on Feb. 5 at the United Nations in Manila City.

The new requirement would require the status of the Fiba-recognized organization signed last year by representatives of the International Basketball Federation of the Philippines and Pilipinas Basketball to secure the sport under a new chapter.

But whether the qualification process would proceed smoothly hinges on a critical meeting last night by the new leadership of the SBP to decide whether it would attend the Fiba Congress.

New SBP president Ted Ting, who presided over the meeting which was given a special, said any decision would be announced today.

Vargas said SBP would want the formation of the national team immediately after the Fiba Congress to complete the requirements of the organization, in time for a key Fiba meeting in Thailand.

SBP officials, led by former Mayor E. Teng, said SBP would want to secure the formation of the national team immediately after the Fiba Congress to complete the requirements of the organization, in time for a key Fiba meeting in Thailand.

The Philippine Basketball Association (PBA) is also planning to hold its annual meeting in March, which is also a key Fiba meeting.

SBP officials had failed to compete in the 2006 Asian Championships in Manila, but they had the chance of a possible strong performance in the 2007 Asian Championships.

"We have a strong team and we don't want to miss the opportunity," said Vargas.

"It's not as easy as the 16 teams in the Fiba would be added to the list for the national team," said Vargas. "It's a difficult thing to do."

$1-B Nonoc mines rehab deal collapses

Philnico opens doors to other investors

By Daniel L. Lanes

EXCLUSIVE NEGOTIATIONS BETWEEN PHILNICO Industrial Corp. and China's Jinchuan Nonferrous Metals Corp. on a proposed $1-billion rehabilitation of the Nonoc nickel mines have collapsed.

In a message sent to the business, Philnico president Ernesto Manzano Jr. said his firm ended talks with Jinchuan after the prospective Chinese investor instead of doing another feasibility study, which would push back the project's start-up indefinitely. This feasibility study, he said, "would delay considerably the project by at least 12 months, with no any assurance of a definitive agreement."

"So we decided to consider other options to move the project forward," he said, adding that Philnico has started talks with other groups—including one led by a group from China—on an EPC (engineering, procurement, construction) project.

"Since the scope of the deal is our negotiations, there have been four companies from China

(two, Russia and Japan who have expressed no clear interest," Manzano said.

Located on Nonoc Island off Iloilo City, the nickel mines is second to last one of the biggest nickel and cobalt deposits in Southeast Asia.

The investment needed to rehabilitate the project would have been the single biggest Chinese investment in the country since 2000.

PDIC eyes sale of P15B in acquired assets

By Clark C. Durbin

THE STATE-OWNED PHILIPPINE Deposit Insurance Corp. is planning to sell as much as P15 billion worth of bad loans transferred from its membership, liquidation

Special Purpose Vehicle Law for the distressed assets.

"We have had several meetings with (auditing firm) KPMG and other firms, to know how they can assist us in the assessment whether we can just sell the SPV structure," Dizon said.

The SPV law intends to help banks get rid of their nonperforming assets by entering some of the assets and existing, but mostly sold, in the sale or
